

The renovation of this home represents a transformation and rebirth from dark, divided spaces into a bright and highly functional urban dwelling. The reformation was designed by local architect, Guy Humphrey with H. Glasgow Construction serving as the general contractors. Like many older homes, the rooms were confining and somewhat gloomy, which limits the function for a modern lifestyle. In this case, by removing and opening walls, the hidden potential of this house was revealed. Especially evident in the kitchen, said to be the most comfortable room in the house, the newly designed space allows guests to gather and flow freely throughout the home.
